FOREIGN NAMES.

Cities Under Strange Titles Which Confuse Travelers.

"How far are you going?" asked my fellow traveler, as we came across the St. Gotthard. "To Paris," I replied. He looked puzzled. Then I recollected that he was an Italian and that he had told me he had never been out of Italy before. "Parigi," I said, smiling, and he knew at once what I meant. Then it occurred to me to mention London to him and see if he understood. He obviously did not. "Londra," I translated. "Ah! Londra," he repeated; "yes, yes, here were two of us journeying together across Europe in an age which is supposed to have broken down the barriers that once hindered free intercourse, yet we were not even agreed as to the names of the principal places on our route."

He called Milan, Milano; Florence, Firenze; Turin, Torino; Naples, Napoli. For Basle he said Basilea, and Lucerne for Lucerna (which the Swiss themselves call Luzern, pronouncing the "z" like ts). Stop a moment, though. When I say he called Florence Firenze, and so on, I am laying myself open to misconception and the charge of insular insouciance. Rather should I put it that we English call Firenze Florence, just as we call Padova Padua and Livorno Leghorn. We cannot even give the eternal city its proper beautiful name. Instead of Roma we say Rome, which is only a trifle better than the Germans, who drop down in their throats grant out "Rom."

The Germans are very bad offenders in this matter of misnaming places, for they give them often such cacophonous equivalents as one would never think of connecting with the real name. The first time I went to Italy I let the train leave Bellinzona without me. I was drinking a cup of coffee and it slipped off. I thoroughly enjoyed a sunny September afternoon's ramble amid vineyards and along the shore (so far as I recollected) of an enchanting little lake. Then I went back to the station to catch the evening service to Milan.

Presently a long and important-looking train thundered in. On it were boards—"Berlin-Mailand." I regarded them idly, wondering where Mailand was and why I had never heard of it before. It was only when I saw a friendly porter wildly summoning me to enter and heard a guard crying out, "Chissao, Como, Milano," that I realized the situation and understood Mailand to be German for the city we call Milan. The German for Venice is even more ill-sounding, "Venedig," who would ever associate that harsh tri-syllable with the glories and loveliness of the miracle city of the lagoons?—London Mail.

Fleetwood's Campaign Clean.

Hon. F. G. Fleetwood received a good reception one evening last week at East Montpelier, where he spoke before a grange. This session of the country borders on Lunenburg and it is only natural and right that the many friends of Mr. Fleetwood in the immediate locality should watch his success with much interest. He is putting up a clean campaign, and whatever the final result will be, it is absolutely certain that no bad scars will be left.—Waterbury Record.

Strange Result of Increased Gold Supply.

One of the strangest results of the increasing gold supply is high interest rates. Most men, and even most editors and financial writers, have assumed that more money means cheaper money. It does; but not lower rates of interest. Interest is what is paid for the use of capital. It is measured by money, but is not really paid in money any more than are real wages. Interest, therefore, shows the same tendency to advance, when gold is depreciating, as do prices or wages.

There are two reasons why interest rates should be high when gold is depreciating. 1. Because, when prices are rising, there are great opportunities to make money, speculatively, by purchasing and holding real property. This fact leads enterprising men not only to borrow all they can at low rates of interest, but to bid for money until rates become very high. 2. To offset the shrinkage in the principal of a debt. Thus, if prices are advancing five per cent, a year, the purchasing power of a dollar is shrinking about five per cent. A man who loaned $1,000 at four per cent, would, at the end of the year, get back $1,040. When, however, he came to spend this $1,040 he would find that it would purchase less than the $1,000 loaned at the beginning of the year. When translated into capital—what was really loaned—he would have received back less than he loaned. That is, instead of receiving interest, he would really have paid the borrower a small premium for holding his capital. The lender should in fairness not only receive back his principal unimpaired, but should receive something for the use of it. He should, in fact, receive a rate of interest that would yield him at least three per cent, after making good the loss to the principal because of the shrinkage in its purchasing power.—Byron W. Holt, in the April Everybody's.
